A collaborative endeavor to serve the Camden community providing the services you need, in one location

Hello Camden!

I hope this message finds you well. Spring is around the corner and despite the relatively mild winter, I am more than ready for the new growth and freshness that spring brings. It reminds me of my good friend's Word of the Year a few years ago of "Bloom". The expression "bloom where you're planted" encourages me to take advantage of the opportunities in my life and be grateful for the present situation, even in circumstances that are not ideal.

Spring's arrival also brings forth the dreaded daylight savings time and losing an hour of sleep. To learn some helpful tips on taking care of your mind and body during this time, check out the helpful guidance from the Sleep Foundation to lessen these risks.

This month is a busy month with many "National" months including National Reading Month, National Nutrition Month, and my personal favorite, National Social Work Month. Join us as we read a little extra, learn about nutrition and its impact on our mental health (page 2), and also take a moment to celebrate the work that Social Workers do in our community.

Have a great day, Jessica Perusse, LCSW-R

Spotlight of the month: National Reading Month

March is National Reading Month. In honor of Dr. Suess's birthday on March, 2nd (1904), National Reading Month began in 1994. National Read Across America Day kicks off on March 2nd where individuals around the nation come together to read books and celebrate the joy of reading.

During the month of March, it is very typical that people will increase their reading throughout the month. Did you know that reading has significant benefits that will continue to pay off in the future? Take this month to learn some of the benefits that come from reading including: strengthening the mental muscles, helping to improve comprehension and analytical abilities, increasing imagination, and boosting memory.

To celebrate, join us this month in reading "Maybe you should talk to someone: A Therapist, HER Therapist, and Our Lives Revealed" by Lori Gottlieb, and then join us for Book Club. Take a look at page 3 for more details

National Nutrition Month

March is National Nutrition Month, making it the perfect time to explore the intricate relationship between food and mental health. While we're familiar with the impact of nutrition on physical health, an emerging field known as Nutritional Psychology is highlighting the profound effect of diet on mental well-being.

Navigating the realm of nutrition can be daunting, with conflicting information, financial constraints, and societal pressures dictating what we should and shouldn't eat. Recognizing that nutrition is deeply personal, it's clear that a one-size-fits-all approach to eating simply doesn't work.

To enhance your nutrition, consider embracing a diet rich in whole foods. This entails consuming foods in their natural state, such as meats, vegetables, fruits, and whole grains, while avoiding heavily processed items. The vibrant colors of vegetables and fruits signify a variety of essential micronutrients vital for bodily and mental functions.

Embrace the goodness of fats, particularly monounsaturated and polyunsaturated fats found in nuts, seeds, fish, and avocados, as they promote brain health and satiety (that feeling of being full). Moreover, if you're on medication, inquire with your healthcare provider about potential nutrient deficiencies linked to your medication, as some drugs can hinder nutrient absorption.

Lastly, enjoy your meals. Enjoyment of food is not only a pleasure but also crucial for optimal nutrient absorption and digestion. When you savor your food, you're likely to eat more mindfully, potentially reducing overall intake while fostering a healthier relationship with food.

By incorporating these practices into your dietary routine, you can not only improve your physical health but also nurture your mental well-being, promoting a harmonious balance between body and mind.

Be sure to check out our social media, Facebook, Instagram, and LinkedIn, all this month for more nuggets of nutrition information that will satisfy your craving to know more!
