A collaborative endeavor to serve the Camden community providing the services you need, in one location

Summer has been warm and wonderful so far, and we're making the most of it by soaking up as much time in the great outdoors as possible. This month, we're spotlighting the many benefits of being outside (check out page 2). A short walk during our lunch break with our furry four-legged friends does wonders for our mood and helps us stay on top of our game.

Speaking of staying busy, we've been busy finalizing plans for our first-ever gala event! You can find all the details on page 5. We're excited to showcase the amazing things our community has to offer, and we promise it will be an event to remember.

In addition to planning the gala, our team has been hard at work defining our vision, mission, and values statements. This important work helps us stay focused on what matters most and guides us on our journey. After many hours of discussion and reflection, we've crafted the following statements:

Vision: Empowering our rural community for a brighter tomorrow

Mission Statement: Fostering healthy, thriving families through thoughtful partnerships that prioritize locally defined needs, focusing on the strength of connectivity and community.

Values:

- Create a welcoming environment: Deliver compassionate, high-quality person centered care
- Empower Individuals: Encourage hope and eliminate stigma
- Promote healing: Create a culture of continued learning and growth
- Focus locally: Provide care that meets the unique needs of our rural community
- Connect: Collaborate and connect with our community and service resources for the benefit of the community
- Be bold: Be courageous, persistent, flexible, and humble

See you soon!

Jessica Perusse - Director, Camden Life Center

Spotlight of the Month: Benefits of the Great Outdoors

With the dog days of summer upon us (can you believe it's August already?), now is an excellent opportunity to step outside and take a deep breath. I'm talking more than just thinking about it; put it into action—get outside for real—and reap the benefits of spending quality time in the great outdoors!

Being immersed in nature truly brings out the best in us. You might not even realize how many of your senses come alive when you're in nature. Sight, sound, smell, touch, and maybe even taste (who doesn't love a sun-ripened wild berry?) are easily activated when we go for a walk, a hike, a swim, or even sit quietly next to a stream.

Recent studies highlight that being outdoors in nature supports mental health in big ways. Spending time in nature has been shown to improve mood, reduce anxiety and depression, boost self-esteem, ease symptoms of dementia, and even help you live longer. Not only do we benefit mentally, but we also see physical benefits! Movement of the body can release endorphins, the "feel-good" neurotransmitters that leave us feeling a little more blissful. Furthermore, the combination of movement and the wonders of nature can reduce stress, which can help reduce inflammation in the body and improve your physical well-being.

Here in upstate NY, we are lucky to have many state parks, lakes, streams, and fields to play in. Yes, adults, we can (and should) play too. In fact, it's encouraged! Looking for a more in-depth way to experience nature? Consider camping, look for a yoga or meditation class that is being offered outdoors, or go for a "float" down some of our waterways. You can also try less known but SUPER easy things like grounding (with your feet in the dirt) or trying forest bathing (it's not what you'd think).

Not able to get outside as much as you'd like? No problem! Studies support bringing nature inside. Filling your living space with houseplants, establishing a window view to admire nature, and perhaps adding a small water feature like a fountain can help you reap similar benefits to being outdoors.

Bottom line - the world is our playground and we should get out there and enjoy it! The benefits are waiting for you!
